Introduction

About Our Company

A B2B (Business-to-Business) broker acts as an intermediary between businesses — typically in the financial markets (Forex, crypto, CFD, stocks, etc.). These brokers don't serve retail clients directly but rather provide services to other businesses, such as:

TYPES OF B2B BROKERS:

1. Wholesale Brokers — Match manufacturers or suppliers with retailers or distributors.

2. Service Brokers — Connect companies with specialized service providers (e.g., IT services, logistics, marketing).

3. Marketplace Brokers — Run platforms where businesses can list, buy, or bid on goods/services (e.g., Alibaba, ThomasNet).

4. Financial Brokers — Facilitate B2B financial services like loans, insurance, or investments.

Technology & Liquidity Provider

Liquidity Provider (LP):

They ensure there's always a buyer or seller available, reducing slippage and tightening spreads. Examples: Prime XM, FXCM Pro, LMAX, GBE Prime, B2Broker, Match-Trade. They may offer multi-asset liquidity (FX, crypto, commodities, indices, etc.).

Technology Provider:

They supply the infrastructure for B2B brokers: Trading platforms (e.g., MT4/MT5 white labels, cTrader) Bridge & aggregation software (e.g., OneZero, Gold-i) CRM systems, Client portal, back-office, payment gateways Risk management tools

Full-Stack Providers:

Firms like B2Broker and Tools for Brokers offer both tech + liquidity in one package for new or scaling brokers.

B2B Brokers Make Profits

Commission-based:

You earn a percentage of the total deal value. Example: You broker a $50,000 deal between a wholesaler and a retailer, and charge 5% commission — that's $2,500 for you. Used in: Freight, wholesale, real estate, finance, etc.

Flat Fees

How it works: You may charge, say, $500 per successful introduction or $1,000 per completed contract. Example: A logistics broker charges a $750 flat fee per shipment they arrange. Used in: Consulting-heavy or lead-gen models.

Markup or Spread

You buy low from one company and sell high to another — the difference is your profit. How it works: Let's say a manufacturer sells widgets for $10/unit. You sell them to a retailer for $12/unit. Your profit = $2/unit. Used in: Product-based brokering, especially with import/export or drop shipping models.

Subscription or Membership Models

You charge access to a network, platform, or list of verified B2B leads. How it works: You run a private supplier network, and companies pay $100/month to access it. Used in: Niche B2B marketplaces or platforms you own.lesaler and a retailer, and charge 5% commission — that's $2,500 for you. Used in: Freight, wholesale, real estate, finance, etc.

Referral Fees or Kickbacks

You refer businesses to a service provider or supplier, and get paid for each referral. How it works: You send a lead to a factoring company. If the lead closes, you get $500 or 10% of the first invoice. Used in: Finance, insurance, B2B SaaS, payment processors, etc.

B2B (Business-to-Business) brokers make money by acting as intermediaries between two businesses—typically a buyer and a seller—facilitating deals, transactions, or partnerships. Here's a breakdown of how they earn:

Daily Yield

0.5% Daily Profit

In the Daily Yield Income program, you earn a fixed daily return of 0.5% on your investment. The earnings are automatically compounded, allowing you to generate returns not only on your initial capital but also on the accumulated profits. This compounding process continues seamlessly for as long as your funds remain active within the system.

Daily Auto-Compound Profit

Daily Auto-Compound Profit Example:

Imagine you earn 0.5% profit daily. With auto-compounding, each day's profit is added to your total balance, so the next day's profit is calculated on this new, larger amount.

Let's say you start with $1,000:

Day 1: $1,000 × 0.5% = $5 → New balance = $1,005

Day 2: $1,005 × 0.5% = $5.03 → New balance = $1,010.03

Day 3: $1,010.03 × 0.5% = $5.05 → New balance = $1,015.08

... and so on.

After 30 days, your balance would grow to approximately $1,161.60, thanks to the power of daily compounding—a lot more than just earning $5 a day without compounding.

Spree Top-Up Fund

100% SPREE WALLET

You receive a 100% Spree Fund in your wallet when you top up your ID for the first time. You have 7 days to redeem it. To use it, activate direct IDs—20% of each direct's amount will be activated in your Spree Wallet. By doing this, your full 100% Spree Fund gets activated gradually. "Unutilized amount will lapse from Spree Wallet after 7 days."

Spree Top-up Fund Using Example:-

Got it! Here's a simplified explanation of how the Spree Fund system works: What is the Spree Fund?

When you top up your ID for the first time, you get 100% of that amount as a Spree Fund (e.g., top-up $5,000 → receive $5,000 in Spree Wallet). This Spree Fund is locked initially. You have 7 days to unlock (activate) it, or the remaining balance will expire.

How to Activate the Spree Fund:

You activate it by adding direct IDs under you.

Each direct ID's top-up activates 20% of their top-up amount in your Spree Wallet.

Example: You add someone with a $1,000 top-up.

You get 20% of $1,000 = $200 activated from your Spree Wallet. You can now use that $200.

To Unlock Full Spree Fund: Keep adding direct IDs.

The sum of 20% of all their top-ups must equal your original top-up (in this example, $5,000). Once that happens, your full Spree Fund is activated and usable.

Important Notes: Only direct top-ups count. Unused Spree Fund expires after 7 days.

Earn More by Levelling Up You can earn money from ten different levels. To unlock each level, you will require one direct recommendation per level—a total of ten direct referrals for all ten levels.
